Biographies

Mitch Mortensen

Mitch has a family history of placer exploration in the Cariboo Gold Fields. Yanks Peak (Snowshoe Mountain) has been his family's focus of mining since the early 1900's. He has over 30 years' experience in mining exploration and staked his first claims in the Yanks Peak area in 2001. In 2012 Snowshoe Mountain Resources was formed and incorporated in 2013. He has been on a variety of projects stretching from Arizona to the Yukon and holds placer/mineral claims in the Mackenzie area of BC, Atlin and Barkerville. Mitch has an extensive life experience in the wilderness and is also a member of the Mackenzie Search and Rescue unit. He also has a significant background as a faller (13years), onsite safety (9years) and onsite emergency services (13) in the oil and gas industry.

Mitch has a deep appreciation for the environment and works with realistic means to balance his ambitions in the industry with his responsibilities to future generations. His respect of historical gold rush and aboriginal archeology reflects in his thorough research on a given project.
